MEETINGS MADE

SERVICES

Meet People. Build Relationships. Expand Horizons.

For Managers

Traveling to meet professional investors can be difficult. Often times, you have a meeting out-of-town and want to make the most of your time by visiting other potential investors in the area.

You are scrambling to find other investors and don't know who may be interested.

Pueblo is the answer. Sign up to the site and enter in some details of the fund(s) to create your page.

Then enter where you are going and when you will be there.

What happens next? An email will be sent to the relevant professional investors who will respond if they would like to meet.

Fees and sign up
This service is free for the successive quarterly periods until Pueblo gets to scale and then offered via subscription thereafter. Sign up will take about 10-15 minutes.

For Professional Investors

Meeting managers is an integral part of manager selection.

The problem is that your inbox is stuffed with meeting requests that are not relevant to you and sometimes the managers that are relevant might not have known that you are interested in meeting.

This is why we have developed Pueblo.

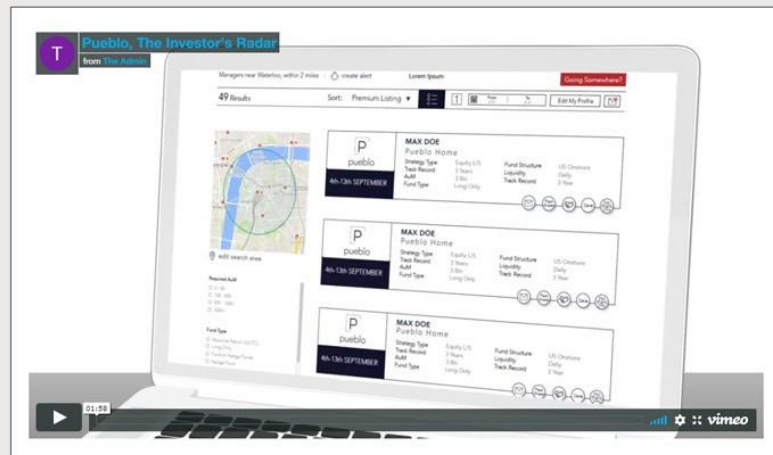

Pueblo lets you know who is in town and when. You only see managers that are relevant to you in a curated, thoughtful way.

You, the investor, are in control. You can choose how often you receive the alerts: daily, weekly, monthly.

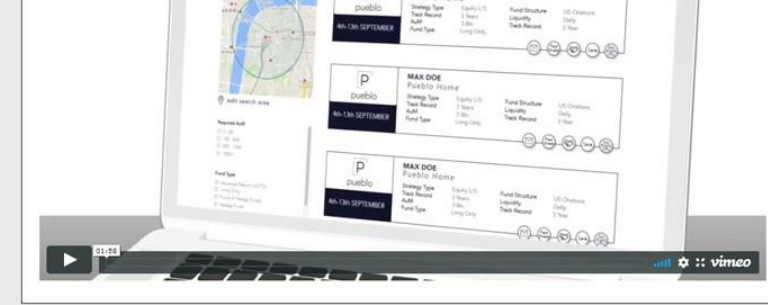

Traveling?
Are you traveling to see a few key managers and want to know if there are other relevant managers you should see?

Easy, just type in the area you are going to be in and see if there are other managers in the area.

Registration is free and fast. It should only take 5 minutes!

Pueblo is private. We do not monitor who is meeting who, where people are traveling, etc. We only monitor clicks to make sure that the service is running as it should. Please read our privacy policy.

Pueblo is private. We do not monitor who is meeting who, where people are traveling, etc. We only monitor clicks to make sure that the service is running as it should. Please read our privacy policy.

SIMPLICITY

How Does it Work?
We want to make it easy.

Step 1

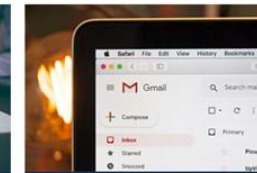

Managers post their schedule on our portal. They can also post things like fact sheets, presentation materials, etc if they are so inclined.

Step 2

Investors enter into the site their hard requirements, such as strategies they are reviewing, track records, liquidity and AuM requirements, legal structures they can allocate to, etc.

The point is to deliver curated, relevant content!

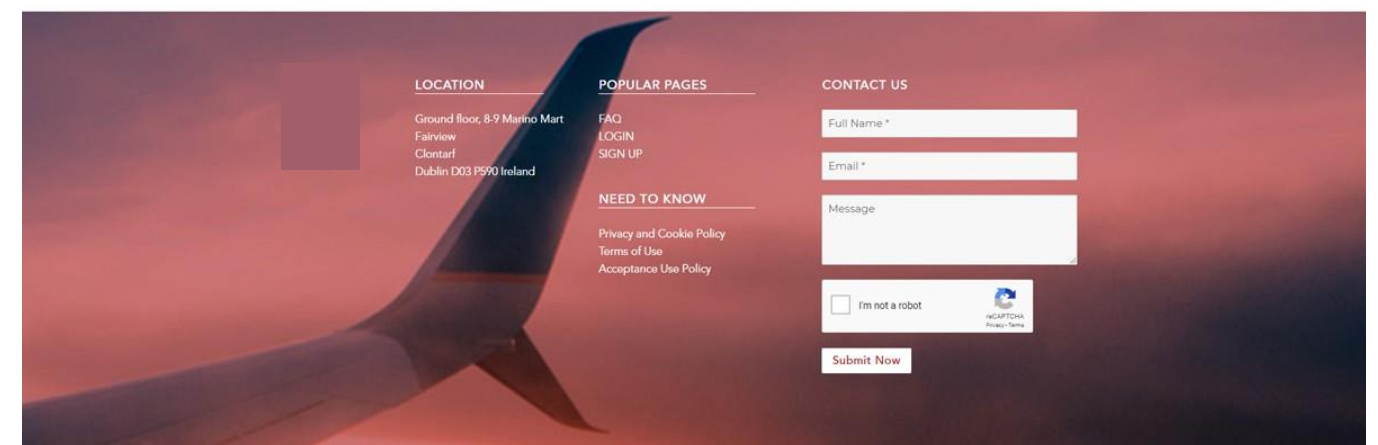

Step 3

Investors will then be notified via a simple email (at a desired frequency) of who is coming to town. Should the investor wish to get in touch, they can either click a link inviting the managers to get in touch, or they can click a link that opens up a scheduler and arrange a time on the spot.

It really is that easy.

Pueblo is only available to professional allocators and fund managers across the asset management industry and not to individual investors. Anyone who accesses the site must be vetted by the administrator before access is granted.

FROM OUR RECENT BLONDIE EXHIBITION

Featured items from Picture This: Blondie by Martyn Goddard

British photographer Martyn Goddard photographed Blondie in June 1976, capturing Debbie Harry and the band in various locations around Manhattan. In hotel rooms, on rooftops, in the recording studio for 'Rapture' - here they are seen on the city. Later that year the photographer travelled to London for the launch of her single 'Picture This' and his 'Wishes in Camera' exhibition.

THE WALL (1984) by Art Kane

"The kids, they were great. I loved their guts. For me they were like cute little ruffians. They made me think of Dickens, of Oliver Twist, Fagin's gang." - Art Kane

Knowing that John Entwistle and Pete Townshend were jackets made from flags, Art Kane decided to bring them in a chain job - actually two, seen together for the session. Initially they worked in his Carnegie Hall studio, including Eric Burdon and Roger Daltry, and subsequently were taken to the group's Montagu Place, now in NYU's Columbia University, where he had them pose wearing, against the base of the Paul Strichlin monument, the wagers to show them as both innocent and lovable - in a double bind of way. This photograph, one of the most iconic images of the band, was used on the cover of The Kids Are Alright.

Artist authorized, actually processed limited edition photographs are available to own in a range of physical sizes.

BUY NOW

We the People (1961) by Art Kane

"We the People" was shot for Look magazine in 1961 for a story about the US constitution.

Art Kane gathered a group of friends together on a distant hillside, then had assistants hold an American flag directly in front him. The high perspective and depth of field, the people were standing on top of the flag. In concept, color and mood, the image conveys a sense of an ongoing session for flags in this early '60s for Art Kane.

Artist authorized, actually processed limited edition photographs are available to own in a range of physical sizes.

Spotlight on a key piece for your collection

8 August, 1968. A Friday. The date of one of the most famous photo-shoots in rock 'n' roll history.

John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr walk over the zebra crossing next to Abbey Road studios, then and back. These iconic six shots of the quartet, just in photographs, and the track was born.

During his lifetime, photographer Ian MacMillan produced and signed a number of colour prints of each of these Abbey Road session photographs, made to the highest archival standards, from the original transparencies. We passed away on 8 May 2008 and signed examples of his work are finite and very scarce. They are highly prized amongst Beatles collectors.

Frame three in the sequence is shown here, showing the Beatles walking left to right, with London traffic in the background. We have one example of this photograph available, made on 20x28 inch paper, from an edition of 25, and signed and numbered on the front under the image area by Ian MacMillan.

Featured items from Picture This: Blondie by Martyn Goddard

British photographer Martyn Goddard photographed Blondie in June 1976, capturing Debbie Harry and the band in various locations around Manhattan. In hotel rooms, on rooftops, in the recording studio for 'Rapture' - here they are seen on the city. Later that year the photographer travelled to London for the launch of her single 'Picture This' and his 'Wishes in Camera' exhibition.
